PLANE CARRYING POLISH FLIERS STILL O'ER OCEAN

Steamship "Aztec" Says Plane Is Sighted; Position 44.22 N., 24.08 W.

EXPECT TO LAND IN N. Y.

Due In U. S. Between 4 and 5 P. M., If All Goes Well

LONDON, Aug. 4.—(INS)—The Polish trans-Atlantic fliers—Major Louis Idzikowski and Major Casimir Kubala—were still in flight towards the American coast and had completed nearly one half of the distance between Europe and the American continent, according to a wireless message received from the steamship Aztec.

The Aztec wireless the Evening News that the plane had been sighted in the position of 44.22 north and 24.08 west.

The message from the Aztec—a Norwegian steamer—was picked up by wireless station at Valentia, on the west coast of Ireland.

The position given by the steamship was approximately 250 miles north-west of the Azores and nearly one-half across the Atlantic, figuring in a straight line from the continent to the American coast line.

It is impossible to tell from the position of the Polish plane whether the Polish fliers were bearing for Canada or Bermuda. When they left Le Bourget Field, Paris, they said they planned to fly by way of Bermuda and stop there for fuel in the event it was necessary.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—(INS)—Somewhere over the Atlantic, two daring Polish fliers, Major Louis Idzikowski and Casimir Kubala, were winging their way westward today, determined to land here safely sometime this afternoon in their powerful single-motored biplane.

They took off from Le Bourget Field, Paris, at 5.49 a. m. (12.49 New York daylight time) yesterday. Before leaving, Kubala stated that he and his companion expected to arrive in New York in forty hours. Should his expectations prove true the plane will land here between four and five o'clock this afternoon.

Two Well-Known Women Rescued From River Here

Two brave boys played the part of heroes yesterday afternoon when they pulled two women from the river at a point near the Anchor Yacht Club.

The women, Mrs. Frank Parr and Mrs. Edgar Spencer, as well as those who witnessed the near drowning, were loud in their praise of the heroism of the two lads.

Mrs. Parr and Mrs. Spencer were two of a group who sought the cooling waters of the Delaware yesterday as a relief from the excessive heat. Mrs. Parr and Mrs. Spencer stepped beyond their depth when they walked off the shore which drops abruptly at this point.

James Hibbs, 18, Pine Grove street, and Arto Straffe, 16, Wood street, went to the rescue. The two boys swam to the women and brought them almost to shore when they were met by others with a boat. In attempting to pull the two women into the boat the craft upset and all were thrown into the water.

With the assistance of others the two women were finally gotten into shore. This is the fifth rescue for young Hibbs.

PICNIC TOMORROW

The Bristol Court, Catholic Daughters of America, will hold a picnic tomorrow afternoon at Neshaminy Falls. The party will meet at Pond and Buckley streets at ten o'clock. Buses are to be provided for transportation.

Parkland

Clarence Schock has purchased the property corner of Highland avenue and Avenue A, where the house was nearly destroyed by fire on Sunday, April 10, 1927, and will at once commence rebuilding on the old foundation. This is a very desirable corner and we are all glad to know that the place is to be rebuilt and occupied by a private family.

On Sunday Parkland Athletic Association played a ball game at Trenton, N. J., with the Trenton Rovers, with a score of 8 to 7, in favor of Trenton.

ANTHRACITE EXHIBIT OPENS AT WILLOW GROVE

Charles A. Waters Is One of The Speakers At Opening

MUCH INTEREST SHOWN

WILLOW GROVE, Aug. 4.—(INS)—The Anthracite Educational Exposition opened here today with practically every form of anthracite products on display. The exposition is being held at Willow Grove Park under the auspices of the Anthracite Boosters Association.

Among the speakers who addressed the throng that witnessed the opening exercises was Charles A. Waters, secretary of Labor and Industry at Harrisburg. Waters said that his department was "vitally interested in the welfare of the anthracite district" and pledged the co-operation of the department in furthering anthracite interests.

Waters urged that Pennsylvania and its citizens protect the industries of the Commonwealth "outside the boundaries of our state." He said:

"We recently had a senatorial snooping committee come into Pennsylvania to pry into the coal business in the western section of our state, with no possibility or hope of finding new facts."

"This committee came into Pennsylvania, visiting our western coal fields and looking for political, not coal facts. Secretary Hoover could have turned over to the Senate more facts about coal than a Senate committee could dig out for itself in ten years, and possibly if it wasn't a presidential year that is the source from which the committee would have gotten its facts."

The secretary pointed out that the anthracite industry employed 160,000 men and that the wages paid to these men amounted to about $300,000,000 a year, and an additional $100,000,000 is paid out for supplies.

In developing this point Waters pointed out that Pennsylvania was without representation on the Interstate Commerce Commission. He declared that "a combine of renegade Republican senators from the north-west, and solid-south Democrats, and West Virginia Coal has tried to regulate the freight rates against Pennsylvania Coal."

"This combine," he said, "prevented the seating of a Pennsylvanian on the Interstate Commerce Commission. Pennsylvania has no representation on the Court of Appeals other than Customs, nor on the Supreme Court of the United States. These are facts to my mind which demand serious consideration, in order that the industrial interests of this great Commonwealth might be protected."

BAR HARBOR TERMINUS OF AUTO TOUR OUTLINED

One of the Great Playgrounds On The Eastern Seaboard

ROUTE FROM BRISTOL

Bar Harbor, one of the great playgrounds on the eastern seaboard, coupled with Lafayette National Park, is the terminus for the vacation trip offered by the Keystone Automobile Club this week.

"Mount Desert Island, situated off the coast of Maine is a spot of rare beauty," said Russell B. Carty, representative of the Keystone Automobile Club in Bristol. "Both the park and the resort are located on the island. Bar Harbor is one of the famous resorts in the northeast. The touring bureau of the Club has had many requests for this particular run during the past two weeks."

To reach this cool resort, from Bristol drive out the Bath Road to South Langhorne. Turn right on the Lincoln Highway and drive to Morrisville and across the bridge to Trenton. Continue on the Lincoln Highway to Princeton and New Brunswick, thence to Newark. In order to miss New York City traffic, a departure from the regular route is advised here.

In Newark, go north with the trolley on Broad Street and turn left onto Harvey street. Turn right onto Belleville avenue, and right onto Washington avenue. Continue on through Belleville, Lyndhurst, Rutherford, East Rutherford, Carlstadt, Woodridge, Hasbrouck Heights, Hackensack, Teaneck, West Englewood, Bergenfield, Dumont, and Cresskill to Alpine, where you take the Alpine-Yonkers ferry to Yonkers. Pass on through White Plains to Port Chester, where the Boston Post Road is met.

Turn left onto the Boston Post Road and pass through Stamford, and Bridgeport, where the great circus winter headquarters are, to New Haven. It is suggested that New Haven or New London, the next city, be the terminus of the trip. (Continued on Page Four)

BUILDING BOOM UNDER WAY IN DOYLESTOWN

New Structures Will Total Cost of $750,000; Several New Homes

NEW TRUST CO. BLDG.

DOYLESTOWN, PA., August 4.—The biggest building boom in the history of this borough is under way at the present time, with the construction of new buildings and homes costing $750,000. All of the construction work is either of a 100 per cent. business nature or of home construction.

The new home of the Bucks County Trust Company to cost over $100,000 is under way. Today it was unofficially announced that the sale of the historic Fountain Inn will be officially announced in several days. It is rumored that the hotel will be continued on a smaller scale and that valuable property and ground adjacent will be developed for business purposes.

Other new buildings in the process of completion are the Hiram H. Keller building and the Dr. Harry Lehman building on East Court street, close to Court House Park.

The new department store of Fred Scheetz, is nearing completion. This will be Bucks county's largest store. It was destroyed by fire several months ago.

The Doylestown Lodge No. 1284, L. O. O. M. is considering the erection of a new Moose home on East State street. A recreational center in which there will be bowling alleys and billiard rooms for both men and women is being developed by a group of young business men. The center will be housed in a new building to be erected shortly.

The sale of the garage and automobile sales rooms of W. Harry Watson, South Main street, has also been announced.

PRAYER MEETING

The series of weekly prayer meetings which will be held under the auspices of the Bristol W. C. T. U., will begin Tuesday evening, August 7th, at the home of Mrs. Harry H. Headley, 301 Washington street, at eight o'clock.

LAWN FETE TONIGHT

The lawn of the Methodist Church will be the scene of a lawn fete this evening. The young women of the Sunday School will be in charge.

LEAVES FOR VACATION

Rev. Paul R. Ronge, left Friday for a vacation. After spending a few days with his brother at Schuylkill Haven, he will go to his home at Danville, Pa.

WAYNESBORO, PA., Aug. 4.—(INS)—Orchardists in this section of the state are faced with the prospect of low prices for their peach crops this year. They point out that of the 15,000 carloads shipped from the South so far this season the average price is between 75 cents to $1 per bushel.

Peach growers here claim that if this price continues they will barely be able to make expenses and some will probably suffer severe losses. Orchardists in this district will start picking the Carmen, Belle and Hiley peaches within the next three weeks. The Elbertas will be ripe the latter part of August.

KEYSTONE TO BUILD SIX AIRPLANES FOR ARGENTINE GOV'T

Work Already Started On Construction of Six Training Planes

ARE OF PELICAN TYPE

Expect to Have Order Completed and Delivered In Next Two Months

Contract for the erection of six training airplanes has been received from the Argentine Government by the Keystone Aircraft Corporation.

The crafts, work upon which has already been started, are to be of the Pelican type, similar to planes previously furnished the South American country. The Pelican model has been adopted by the Argentine navy as standard training equipment.

The boats, being two-seated biplanes, are equipped with Wright Whirlwind engines, and may be brought down on either land or water. When used as seaplanes, the landing gear is readily changed to the floating type.

Certain military equipment is furnished on the planes, the specifications being furnished by the Argentine government.

It is expected that the six air pieces will be completed and ready for delivery within the next two or three months.

A motor trip was taken to Langley Field, Virginia, one day recently by Edgar N. Gott, president of the Keystone Aircraft Corporation, and C. Talbot Porter, where the two conferred with members of the Second Bombardment Group in regard to equipment from the Keystone plant now in use at the field.

The Keystone Company manufactured all of the bombardment planes located at Langley Field. Nine of the crafts will be flown about September 1st, to Los Angeles, to be present during the international air meet at that western city. The aviators will put on a show and an exhibition of bombardment maneuvers at that time.

Lt. A. W. Gordon, of the Naval Aircraft Factory, Philadelphia, visited at the Keystone Aircraft Corporation plant here, yesterday, making an inspection of the place.

The visitor, who recently captured several world records with the famed XPN-12, a flying boat, expressed his pleasure over the work carried on in the local aircraft factory.

The lieutenant made the trip to Bristol in order to confer with Keystone Corporation officials regarding navy planes being built here.

"BELIEVE 'EM OR NOT," SAYS MEREDITH, "HERE'S OUR SNAKE STORIES"

Annual Crop Harvested — Reptiles Eat and Are Eaten — Some Whoppers Reported — Even Hold-Up Snakes Now

Here is a collection of snake stories appearing in this week's issue of The Quakertown Free Press:

On entering her cellar at Pen Argyl, one morning, Mrs. John Couch saw a large copperhead snake coiling itself ready for an attack. George Marsh dispatched the snake with a club. Other Pen Argyl residents complain of snakes finding their way into cellars.

A sixteen-weeks-old heifer, owned by Lloyd Grugan, of Shintown, near Renovo, Pa., was bitten on the end of the nose by a copperhead snake in a field near Grugan's home and died twenty minutes after being bitten.

Professor Green, of State College, and forty students recently dined on rattlesnake on the "nature study grounds" near Bear Meadows, in the Seven Mountains. The party was camping in the wilds when Jesse Hasinger, State trapper, brought in a large snake, bearing thirteen rattles, and the women in the camp prepared the delicacy for the evening meal. A black snake, five and one-half feet long, brought in by the game wardens, was converted into a pet.

While pulling weeds in the garden, Monday evening, Mrs. Charles Gouak, of Prospectville, Bucks county, was bitten on the hand by a large black water snake. The incident occurred so suddenly that Mrs. Gouak was shocked severely. Her husband, working nearby, hurried to her assistance and swiftly applied treatment. A swelling set in rapidly. The bite proved less harmful than at first feared, however, and the pain later abated and no poison resulted. The snake when killed measured over three feet and was found to be a native water reptile which had strayed from its usual haunts.

FIRE APPARATUS CO- HEAD MARVELS AT MUNICIPAL BUILDING

Charles H. Fox, of Cincinnati, Says Nothing He Has Seen Compares With It

NOTHING OVERLOOKED

Every Detail Was Planned With Thoughtfulness and Thoroughness

Scrutinizing with the eye of an expert every nook and corner of Bristol's municipal building and fire station Charles H. Fox, president of Ahrens-Fox Fire Engine Company of Cincinnati, yesterday made a most careful and minute inspection of that building in which this borough's civic activities are centered.

Mr. Fox, a fireman of many, many years of practical experience, expressed delight and pleasure and frequently uttered exclamations of wonderment at the manner in which every detail had been planned for and executed, so as to give the maximum efficiency in the different activities which center in this building.

"I cannot help but marvel at the completeness of things," said Mr. Fox. "I note as I have gone through your building that every detail has been carried out with thoughtfulness and with a thoroughness not often seen. The structure itself and its appointments, appurtenances, and furnishings are of a high quality."

The visitor, who is the head of the nationally and internationally known fire apparatus company, is on a tour of the principal cities of New York State, the New England states, and the Eastern territory in general, stated that he had had a keen interest in Bristol, and a great desire to come here ever since having received the order for the five pieces of the most modern fire-fighting apparatus which is now the borough equipment. "This is my first visit in Bristol, and I made up my mind that I was going to see what this great development was here." At this point Mr. Fox produced one of the illustrated monthly bulletins which his company distributes very widely. On the cover page was a handsome photograph of Bristol's municipal building with all of the fire apparatus grouped at the entrance.

C. E. Wood, representative of the Ahrens-Fox company in this territory, accompanied Mr. Fox to Bristol, and will escort him through the eastern territory.

Mr. Fox is a practical fire-fighter from every standpoint. He became a member of the Cincinnati Fire Department when 19 years of age. In fact it is said that he stoked one of the old coal-burning pumps in that department. He advanced to the position of assistant chief and because of his mechanical ability was made a draftsman in the engineering bureau of the city's fire department. As an engineer he remodeled practically all of the city's fire stations and built a number of modern ones, many of which are still in existence. He then became associated with the Ahrens Company, and a short time thereafter his name was placed alongside that of Ahrens, and the company became known as Ahrens-Fox Fire Engine Company.

Upon the occasion of his visit here this old-time fire-fighter and a man who is now considered as one of the leading experts in his line in America, was met by Chief Burgess Clifford L. Anderson, Joseph R. Grundy, Chief James L. McGee, Clarence W. Winter, chief of fire alarm system, Louis B. Gorton, chairman of a fire committee, and chief of police John J. McGuckin.

Beginning in the fire station the group toured every part of the building from cellar to roof. Mr. Fox had demonstrated to him the intricate workings of the Gamewell Fire Alarm System with its almost human mechanism. He was shown the portion of the building devoted to police activities and he manifested great interest in the sanitary appointments of that section devoted to the incarceration of prisoners.

The water department, tax collector's office, justice of peace office, borough engineer's headquarters, police and firemen's dormitories, assembly hall, fire chief's office, borough council chamber and the committee rooms were all inspected.

"I have been in many cities and towns throughout America," said the visitor, "but I have yet to find a single instance where a municipality comparable with Bristol has anything to compare with your building here. The architects who planned the structure and those who arranged for its furnishings certainly gave much time and thought to the subject in hand. Of course it would be natural for me to say that your fire fighting apparatus is of the very best obtainable, but exclusive of this I can only say in my humble way that what you have here cannot be surpassed."

A VACATION EXAMPLE

News pictures taken of President Coolidge before his departure from Washington in June and since the establishment of his summer residence in the forests of Wisconsin furnish graphic proof that he is getting from his vacation something few vacationists get although in theory it is the very thing they are seeking. This elusive thing is a rest.

It is evident that Mr. Coolidge was in need of the rest he is capturing at Brule. He left Washington tired, haggard and nervous. Every newspaper photograph and dispatch from Cedar Island Lodge bring the news, most gratifying to every American, that he has set aside the cares of state for the moment and is permitting nothing to detract from his vacation pleasures. He is fortunate in having chosen for his vacation recreation one of the most restful and composing of sports—fishing.

Those who have never occupied a position of public trust do not always realize that the strain of the presidency makes itself felt upon the strongest constitution and affects even the most self-contained nature. It can shatter iron nerves and break the most vigorous body.

Than Calvin Coolidge, no president has been more faithful and conscientious in the performance of his duties, and few have accomplished more for the general welfare. The wholesome effect of his watchfulness and the persistence with which he has adhered to his policies have been felt in every home. He has a way of deciding great questions that make them seem commonplace and of little consequence, of doing difficult things in a way that makes them seem easy to the public. He never plays to the grandstand, though that is sometimes the easiest way.

TALKING MOVIES

Movie producers and players are in a lather over the talking film situation. Producers are in a quandary. They know that the next two years will see a wide-spread development of the "talky." It is up to them to go along or fade out of the picture.

The equipment for producing such films is expensive. There is no guarantee that public favor will not revert to the "silent drama." If that happens, the producer is stuck. Meanwhile, theatres which feature sound reproduction along with the films are "packing 'em in." The film of the immediate future, to all appearances, is the "talky." Producers simply must plunge and trust in providence.

But the producers are not alone affected. Scenario writers are confronted with new problems. A new-type story which will bridge acceptably the gap between action and talk is demanded. The "talkies" now made are interesting chiefly because of their novelty.

Nowhere is the consternation greater than among the screen players. The movies have been a refuge for the Thespian with a handsome or expressive face who found himself handicapped on the legitimate stage by a weak or unconvincing voice. Where will he be in the "talky?" Moreover, many of the latter-day movie stars began their histrionic careers in the movies and know little or nothing of diction or vocal stage deportment.

There is bound to be a lively shakeup throughout the industry from exhibitor to producer. The movies, used to relatively smooth sailing, have run up against a genuine problem.

SYNOPSIS

A satchel containing $200,000 has been stolen from a bank. The Professor, leader of a gang of crooks, suspects pretty Rose Shannon of knowing where the money is. Chuck White, one of his gangsters, invites Rose to visit a supposed "aunt" in the country, hoping that she may give the game away inadvertently. When Rose tearfully denies all knowledge of the robbery, Chuck determines to protect her. Suspecting that Chuck is double-crossing him, the Professor arrives with his gang. They overpower Chuck, leaving the Professor alone in the cottage with the terrified girl. He gives her one hour in which to "confess."

"Well, have you thought better of your refusal to tell me what I want to know?" The Professor's voice brought Rose up to a sitting position.

"I can't—I can't tell ya anything," Rose's voice caught in choking sobs. "I don't know an-anything about it."

"That story won't go, you know," the Professor jibed. "Come across, now, before I—" he started to reach towards her.

"Oh, no! Please! Can't you see I don't know anything about the robbery? Oh, why can't you let me alone?" She tried to turn away from the man's hypnotic gaze, but his eyes held her spellbound.

"You're lying," the Professor jumped to his feet, catching the girl by the shoulders, and lifting her up until he looked squarely into her about her. Easily he lifted her off her feet, kicking, struggling, clawing at his face, tugging at his hair, and threw her onto the bed.

His kisses were hot on her lips. He covered her face with lascivious caresses. His arms were about her, bearing her down—down into an abyss of horrible fear and shame. His fingers bruised the white flesh, leaving little red marks on the tender skin. He clutched at the negligee, the gown, tearing them, his face grim and determined, paying no heed to the vain attempts of the girl to release herself.

And then Rose's teeth sank deep into the back of his hand. With an infuriated cry of mingled pain and rage he drew back, catching at his hurt member. Left a flash Rose was on her feet, running across the room. Once more she attempted to dart towards the door, but once more the Professor was already ahead of her. Rose flung herself at him, beating his chest with her tiny, clenched fists, but he only laughed that knowing, cynical laugh. She tried to reach the lock, but he caught hold of her arm and slowly drew her towards him.

Meanwhile the slow moving "local" crept at a snail's pace through the night. Against the windows, grimy with smoke and dust, the rain beat in driving sheets, splashing and splattering the panes, seeping in from underneath the sashes and mingling with the heavy coating of coal dust on the inner edges. A swaying, smoking, acetylene lamp swung back and forth in the center of the car, shedding a sickly yellow glow over the five occupants of the coach.

A strange group these people made. Molly, leaning her arm against the dirty window-sill, her feet propped up on the seat opposite, was lazily smoking a cigarette. Beside her sat Mug, his loose, heavy face greenish in the pale light. Behind them, Sparrow lolled against the window, staring out into the night. Across from him sat Chuck, his one eye now completely closed and rapidly turning a blue black, nursing his bruises as the train jolted along over the wet rails. At his side was Lefty, his hand thrust deep into his pocket, gripping a gun that kept its ever watchful nose against the boy's ribs.

Silently they rode along, each busy with his own thoughts. Chuck looked around at his companions as though measuring their strength, but he was one against four, and those four were desperate. If he could only make a getaway! He shuddered as he thought of Rose back there in that lonely house with no one save the Professor. Desperate, he turned to the man beside him, a pleading look on his tense, drawn face.

CHAPTER XVII

"Aw, Lefty, for God's sake, have a heart! Lemme go!" he began. "I won't pull nothing. I gotta get back to her."

"Damn ya, shut up!" The Mug twisted about in his seat, throwing the words over his shoulder with an evil sneer.

Molly's elbow dug into his side. The Mug looked up quickly to see the conductor entering the coach. The trainman swayed down the aisle, calling for tickets. The Mug reached into his pocket and pulled out the bits of pasteboard and held them up.

Chuck could feel the weapon pressed more tightly against him. He looked up as though to speak and then evidently thought better of it, for he turned away and stared intently out of the window.

The conductor took the tickets, clipping them with his punch and handed them back to Mug. "Change at Asheville," he announced, saying with no uncertain interest at these people. They certainly looked like peculiar customers. However, it was none of his affair who traveled on the trains so long as they paid their fares and caused no trouble. And so he shrugged his shoulders and swung on down the aisle, and through the door into the carriage ahead.

"Say, listen," Chuck began again, as soon as the outsider had left them. "Can't you be a good sport an'—"

"If ya don't close yer trap damn quick I'm gonna bean ya." The Mug turned once more, his eyes hard and cold. "Ain't ya had enough fer one night?" he retorted, concluding the conversation by turning around once more and settling himself down into his seat.

Again they rode along in silence, Chuck gazing steadily out of the window, his eyes troubled, unheeding the little trickles of water that ran along the window ledge dampening his coat sleeve. In the midst of his preoccupation he felt a slight movement against his foot. Slowly he allowed his eyes to travel down towards the floor and now could see Sparrow's narrow shoe edging closely along his.

A safe place to live—

This thought is uppermost in the minds of every individual seeking a place of residence today.

SAFE

- As to health
- As to keeping children away from lanes of traffic
- As to open spaces in which children may play
- As to the general surroundings of the community.

SAFETY

in every sense of the word is typified in the modern dwellings which can be rented from me for $25 per month.

Every house is constructed of brick—safety from fire.

Every house is sewered — safety from disease-breeding spots.

Every house is lighted by electricity—safety from antiquated lighting systems.

Every house faces on open spaces, thus having plenty of light and fresh air—safety as to health.

Every house is far from the main highways of traffic — safety for the children.

Two-story brick residences containing six rooms and bath for $25 per month. All newly papered and painted throughout. Conveniences which are to be found in any modern house today: electricity, gas, hot-air heater, water.

All are located in a desirable residential section and close to railroad station and industries.

STORES

A number of small stores in good locations suitable for grocery stores and meat markets. Rents moderate.

HOLMESBURG HAWKS TO PLAY HERE TOMORROW

(By T. M. June)

Tomorrow afternoon on St. Ann's Field, St. Ann's will meet the strong Holmesburg Hawks, a colored team.

This is the second time that the teams are scheduled to play, the first game being called off because of rain. The Holmesburg team has visited Bristol before, having defeated the Harriman Field Club on the local field.

Manager Sagolla has elected De Risi, who pitched a wonderful game against Tullytown last Sunday, to be on the firing line for his squad. Stallone will be his battery mate.

O'Rioli will be at the initial sack. Seneca, the regular keystone guard, is on the injured list and may see action as a pinch-hitter. Paletta will be at second. Roe will be the short-stopper. McDevitt will be on third.

The outer garden will be composed of Fields, Missera, Giffardi or Pico. Game starts at 3.00 p. m.

Next Sunday the return game that St. Ann's promised to Tullytown will be played on the paper mill's grounds. Tickets for this game may be procured from any of the St. Ann's ball-players.

Game scheduled for last night between the A. O. H. and Independent nines, was called off because of a heavy downpour just before playing time.

On our faithful roster's list—Thomas Hoffman, the paperhanger.

Johnny Elmer, one of the argument-settler, is sporting a black eye. The result of a run-in with a player.

We heard the manager of a local team singing "I wonder where my wandering ball-players are tonight?"

Tullo, of the "Saints" holds two shut-outs over the Hiboes this half. Kohler boasts of the same feat against the champs.

Old age seems to have given away to youth on the Hibernians team.

A busy man during all games is "Doc" Martin who tends to the St. Ann's stand.

A large amount of the spectators are of the opposite sex.

Something that's never missing—a chew in "Fatty" Riola's jaw.

"Hughy" Brady is pulling off some big league catches in center-field for the Hibs.

The Independents, almost the Field Club nine, has a long list of sluggers.

Believe it or not. A Twilight League team made four hits in one inning, yet failed to score.

The Independents seems to be champions when they play St. Ann's. When they are playing another team they are just ball players.

"Mike" De Risi, of the first half winners; "Eddie" Callahan, of Leedom's; "Pomp" Piazza and "Jake" Tranotti, of the Independents are the school boys of the league.

Our job-printing department is capable of attending to your stationery wants. Orders for job-work will be quickly attended to.

Victor in Sprint

Pretty Elizabeth Robinson of Chicago led the field in the 100-metre event for women athletes at Amsterdam, her time being 12.15 seconds. She is one of first girl contestants to score for Old Glory.

Johnny Farrell's Victory Triumph For Iron Nerve

New Open Champ Must Get a Snicker at Memory of His Old Critics

By JAMES Y. KEENE International Illustrated News Sports Editor

New York.—Johnny Farrell must have indulged in a few furtive snickers the other day when folks kept coming up to tell him what a great fighter he was.

He had come from behind to tie Bobby Jones, the great Atlantan. In the play-off he kept within a single stroke of a ferocious par all the way for thirty-six holes and his first championship. He showed his iron nerve by sinking the winning putt after an overzealous photographer had broken his concentration.

Johnny can remember when the boys weren't quite so generous in their encomiums. When it was quite the thing to dismiss him as one of the faint-hearted brigade.

But gameness has been with Farrell all the time. He gave a great exhibition of it last Spring in winning the La Gorce tournament at Miami Beach. He had to beat 65 on the last round to win—and did it. Even the fact that the man he had to beat had shot the first nine in an incredible 30 didn't shake him.

The records show that Farrell has been competing in the open since 1920. He scored 315 in his debut, turning in successive rounds of 80-77-78-80. His name was forty-fifth in the list that was topped by Ray, the giant pipe-smoking, lumbering Briton.

In 1925 Farrell came within a pin head's width of winning. He shot the first round in 71, the second in 74, and the third in 69. And then, with the championship in his pocket, he blew the works on the last round with a 78, and once more the boys nodded their heads and repeated that he'd never make it because something was lacking.

In 1926 he finished in a triple tie for third place with 74-79-69-73—297. Jones was the winner. Last year he limped home in a three-cornered tie for sixth place with 81-73-78-76—308. This year, to win, he scored 77-74-71-72—294. It was two strokes higher than his best previous record for the open, but it was good enough to get him home in front.

A group of 25 representative citizens met recently with Burgess John H. Klink and discussed plans for entertaining the publishers should this city be awarded the convention for next year.

Commercial Traveler (to proprietor he found playing checkers with friend in back of store).—"Do you know there are two customers in the store?"

The dealer kept right on playing, and whispered—"That's all right. Keep quiet and they'll go away again."

believed, the snake he saw while helping to make hay on the farm of Frank Davidheiser, at Glasgow, is the largest that has ever been seen in those parts, and is similar in size only to those seen in the Philadelphia Zoo. He asserts that he saw a snake that in size resembled a python, and said it was a blacksnake. "If it was a foot long," says Fritz, "it was fifteen feet in length with a head as big as a man's two fists. Its body was as thick as a stovepipe. Some snake!"

There were four men working in the hay field, and although armed with pitchforks, the snake was of such size that they feared to attack it. Persons acquainted with snake-lore say that they usually travel in pairs, so according to that there must be two of that size. Farmers in the vicinity are keeping a close watch on their young shoots, fearful that they will be carried off by the huge reptile.

Cops "KBT" Dead Snake

Policemen responded with sawed off shotguns, scores of automobiles became blocked in a traffic jam and great excitement prevailed for a time in the Pembroke section of Bethlehem recently, where a motorist came upon a huge blacksnake lying in the middle of the road. Fearful lest the sinister looking reptile should escape, the motorist who discovered it kept his headlights focused on the spot while others quickly ran to the R. and R. garage and asked the proprietor, J. A. Reinhard, to notify the police. In the meantime hundreds of persons had assembled at a safe distance from where the snake lay in the road. Officers Davis and Borman started from headquarters post haste with the shot guns to be used in dispatching the snake, which it was believed had escaped from the Sparks circus which had exhibited in the Pembroke section. Before the arrival of the policemen, Mr. Reinhard's curiosity had become aroused and he left his garage to get a look at the snake, which appeared to be sleeping in the road. He approached the reptile very cautiously despite warnings from those about, and gave it a kick. To his surprise and relief he found that the snake was lifeless.

Hijacking Snakes

A graphic story of a struggle with a temporarily crazed youth who was found on a road near Minersville with a three-foot diamond-back rattler wrapped around his neck and clutched in both hands, was told by Dr. Leroy Purcell at Pottsville. Louis Karbosky, 23, Mt. Pleasant, near Pottsville, is the youth who battled the snake. Karbosky was discharged from the Pottsville hospital the next day, apparently none the worse for his adventure except the shock. Dr. Purcell found no sign of the snake's biting him. "Karbosky was on his way to visit friends at a settlement eight miles from his home," Dr. Purcell said, "and was taking a short cut through the woods. When he was five hundred yards from the settlement, his screams were heard by two friends, Peter Mowry and John Hopple, who ran to his assistance with several others. They found Karbosky writhing in the path with the snake partly wrapped about his neck, and one of them immediately summoned me. When I arrived, I found Karbosky still clutching the reptile, and tossing back and forth as though in an epileptic fit. By this time he had pulled the snake's head practically off its body. Together we tried to calm Karbosky, but it was impossible. The combined efforts of five of us were of no use, as he seemed possessed of superhuman strength, and tossed us aside easily. I then decided to use chloroform, and administered the drug without effect. I tried a second time, and then a third, finally the drug began to overpower the youth. As his muscles relaxed, we pried loose the body of the snake from his fingers, which had never loosened their grips on its body and neck. He had torn the snake apart. "I thought I was being held up," Karbosky said. "The snake leaped at me from bushes overhead. I think the snake thought I was attacking it, as my hat touched the bushes and shook them. Its tail hit me over the chest three or four times and its head was over my left shoulder. Then I felt the snake curl up the back of my neck. I grabbed the tail first. Then I grabbed the head and that's all I remember. There was no rattle, no warning of any sort."

The story is told of a young corpsman who had attended a dance and was returning over a mountain trail when he heard a sound and felt something strike his leg. He immediately started to run, and was certain a snake had bitten him. Eager to reach medical aid, he ran nearly two miles, and was in a state of collapse when he reached town. Fellow corpsmen found a large rattler had struck, entangled his fangs in the wool stockings, and had suffered a broken back in the two-mile flight. The corpsman, whose name is not on record, was unscathed.

Says Mr. Fordyce:

"Did I hear someone ask for snake stories? Then here are a few true ones. No. 1—Mrs. Morris, of Lower Milford, going to the wood-pile saw a black snake coiled up, but before she could get something to kill it, he got away. No. 2—Paul and Warren Hoffman were fishing in the creek when a big black snake with a very large head struck out at them. Paul said if he had his '22' he would have shot it, but not having it, they got away, the snake chasing after them. No. 3—Mrs. Fordyce was in the garden and felt something soft under her foot and, lo, she was treading on the tail of a green garter snake. She got off quickly, and the snake wiggled off just as quickly.

Bar Harbor Terminus Of Auto Tour Outlined

stopping point for the first day's run. Continue on the Shore Road the next day, through Stonington, Westbury, Saunderson, and Providence to Boston. From Boston continue to Cambridge, where the Harvard University campus can be viewed. Continue on through Somerville, Everett, Chelsea, Revere, Lynn, Swampscott, Salem, Beverly, Wrentham, Hamilton, Ipswich, Rowley, Newbury, Old Town, Newburyport, and Rye Beach to Portsmouth. There are many fine beaches on this route, where the motorist can stop for an ocean dip.

It is suggested that the second day's journey end in Portsmouth. In the morning continue north through Biddeford to Portland. From Portland, bear right along the shores of Maine through Yarmouth, Bath, Woolwich, Wiscasset, New Castle, Damariscotta, Glendon, West Warren, Rockport, Camden, Belfast and Hampden to Bangor.

Bear right at Bangor to Ellsworth, and take the right hand fork in the road to the new bridge which connects Mount Desert Island with the mainland. On the island is the only national park east of the Mississippi River. It is a beautiful spot well worth visiting.

It is suggested that the return trip be made over the same route as the road conditions are the best in that section.
